Name: Maggie Loring

I have been a member of PSIA since I was old enough to do so! I got my certification at age 18. I then got my degree in child development, and that got me excited to work on kids' education in ski schools. I became active with the Eastern region kids' committee in the 80's, and then the National kids committee – and then decided to become an examiner in the Eastern division so that I would be taken seriously. Since becoming an examiner in 1995 I have been active in both kids and women's education and have been a member and now chair of the Women's Council for Equity and Inclusion. I have also spent many years trying to get more involvement from the member ski schools as a Ski School Director and as past chair of the National Director advisory. I am currently the Training Manager for the Ski and Ride School at Solitude Mountain Resort, and working for the Intermountain Region as a DECL.

I'm passionate about keeping women in the pipeline and getting more opportunities for women to follow their passion in Snowsports. I have a broad level of experience as a teacher, leader, and advocate. I hope to help guide the region from that broad base of experience.

"True belonging requires us to be vulnerable, get uncomfortable, and learn how to be with people without sacrificing who we are and what we value." You can be brave and still be who you are. From Dr Brene Brown in her book Braving the Wilderness.
